who stated that he knows Kesserling, but does not know where he lives. He told me to come back about 7 P.M. when his daughter would be home and she would be able to give me the information I desired.

At 7 P.M. I returned and interviewed this woman, who stated that she did not know where Frederick Kesserling lives, but believed it is somewhere in Astoria, L.I. Operative then told her he had the address of Kesserling's mother in Brooklyn, but she pleaded with me not to go there to disturb his mother as she is 82 years of age and very nervous. Operative then told her that if she did not know Mr. Kesserling's address that he would have to go to Brooklyn to interview his mother in order to get it. She then gave the name of Mr. Reinle and said that he keeps a saloon in Astoria, but she did not know just where, and if I could locate him he would be able to tell me where Mr. Kesserling could be found.

Operative referred to the telephone directory and found the name of Emil Reinle, 54 Jamaica Ave., Astoria, L.I. It was nearing 11 P.M. and Operative decided to visit Astoria the following day.
